

Traffic Stop, Part 1: What to Expect

If I don't follow a traffic law, I may be stopped by the police.

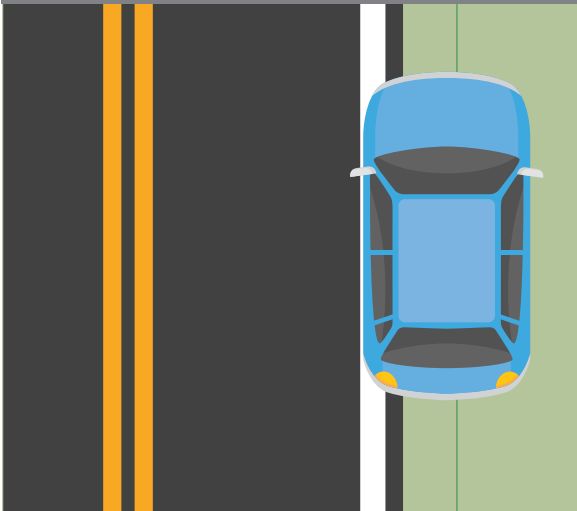

This might be driving over the speed limit or driving through a red light.

The police officer will turn on the lights and siren of the patrol car.

This is how I will know I should pull my car to the side of the road.

When I see the police car lights behind me and/or hear sirens, I should safely and quickly pull my car to the side of the road.

When the police officer walks up to my car, I should put my window down and keep my hands on the steering wheel.

I may want to tell the officer, "I have autism".

I should never get out of the car unless the police officer tells me to. I should follow everything that the police officer tells me.

The police officer may want to see my driver's license and car's registration card.

I should tell the officer where my license is before reaching for it.

If I don't understand something the police officer says, I should tell the officer, "I don't understand".

I should not sign any paper unless I know what it means.
